Peer review

Introduction

Why does it work?

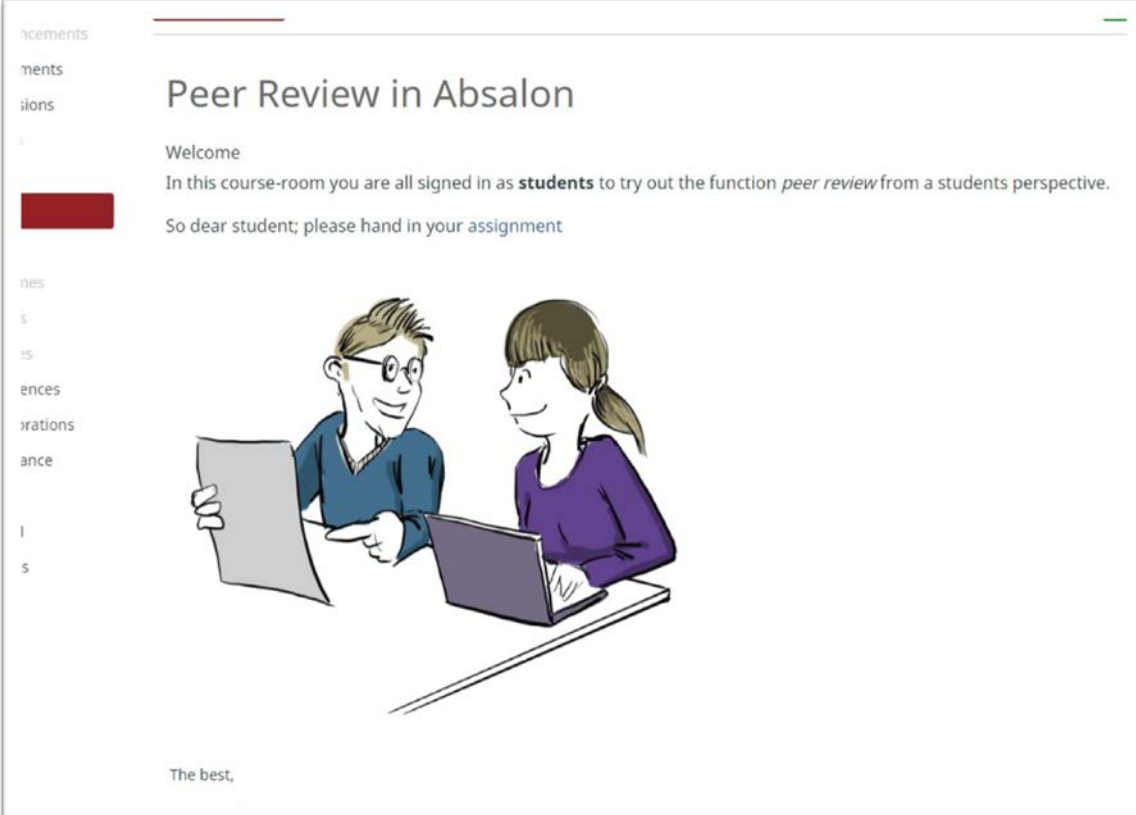

- Giving feedback = receiving feedback
- Better explanation than from the teacher...

In this assignment, you have to read the following passage and answer the questions below.

The aim of the assignment is that you demonstrate your understanding of dilemmas, your ability to discuss challenges and your ability to come up with potential solutions.

Morten wants to go to a demonstration
This is a real situation told by a social worker at a home for adult handicapped.

*Morten is 23 years old and lives at the residence, where I work.
For a long time we have tried to motivate Morten to get out and participate in some activities - so far without success. Morten has now decided that he would like to participate in a demonstration. Morten does not feel safe going alone, and therefore he should be followed by an employee.
The demonstration is organized by the Danish Nazi party and is in favor of Nazism.*

How to give peer feedback

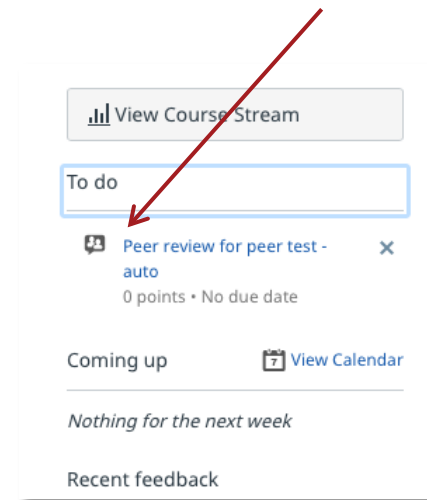

Fellow students are not teachers or examiners.

Students provide each other feedback on their work by asking and suggesting. Not criticizing.

Now it is almost your turn...
